

Run reports of your notes and annotations

Create unique issues for the case

Hyperlinked keyword index makes searching a breeze

The screenshot displays the Reportex software interface. The main window shows a transcript with the following text:

1 Q Dr. Ash, during your assessment did the plaintiff
 2 report having headaches since this accident?
 3 A Yes. He reported that he has regular headaches, and during the interview he asked me to turn on the fan to help mask his tinnitus.
 What is your understanding to be the cause of the plaintiff's headaches and tinnitus?
 The brain injury he sustained in the accident.
 9 Q Do you know if he was wearing a bicycle helmet on 10 the day of the motor vehicle collision?
 11 A The ambulance crew report indicates that a helmet
 12 was found at the scene of the accident.
 13 Q Do you know if the plaintiff has pursued Dr. Mak's
 14 recommendation of retraining for a different job?
 15 A He still hopes to return to the fire department
 16 and will not retrain just yet, as I understand.
 17 THE COURT: Counsel, I would like this report in Word
 18 format at some point, please.
 19 MR. GOWAN: I will have that for you tomorrow, My Lord.

Annotations are visible in the transcript, including a note on line 3: "Ash IME was three years post accident". A sidebar on the right shows a "Dynamic Index" with a list of keywords and their occurrences, such as "accident (3 Found)", "ambulance (1 Found)", "assessment (1 Found)", "bicycle (1 Found)", "brain (1 Found)", "collision (1 Found)", "Counsel (1 Found)", "COURT (1 Found)", "Crew (1 Found)", "department (1 Found)", "different (1 Found)", "Dr. (2 Found)", "during (2 Found)", "fan (1 Found)", "fire (1 Found)", "format (1 Found)", and "GOWAN (1 Found)".

Write notes about evidence

Annotate issue-coded text on the fly

Realtime Court Reporting

- Instantly review evidence while the witness is testifying
- Annotate critical admissions and evidentiary points
- Copy/paste from annotation reports directly into written argument

(604) 684-4347
reception@reportex.ca

Contact us today to learn how these benefits can help you litigate.

